Brick Mill Landing or Hardcastle Mill House

Circa 1790

Ridgely

Private

Standing on the edge of a dirt road near the Choptank River north of Denton is the brick house associated with Hardcastle's Mill. It is a small dwelling with the same fenestration as Castlebury on the adjoining farm. Its facade is laid in Flemish bond and has a sophisticated Federal string course.

"This house stands on part of a tract called Sayer's Addition, the part re-patented under the name Luck by Chance (1787). In 1797 Luck by Chance was purchased by John Hardcastle of Caroline County, son of Thomas Hardcastle. A deed of 1802 (Caroline County Land Records) mentioned John's grist mill. In the accounting of the disposition of his estate in 1816, his brick mill house is mentioned." (Horse, E.F., Origins of Caroline County, Vol. II, at printer)

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Hardcastle Mill House is located on River Road approximately seven-tenths of a mile north of Holsinger Lane near Ridgely in Caroline County. Built along the Choptank River, it is a small Federal style house depicting the affluence of a miller during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century.

The house is two storys with a gable roof and interior chimneys at both ends. The east facade is three bays with a three brick string course (in which the uppermost bricks protrude beyond the bottom two rows) between the storys. This facade has a central door way with newer two over two pane sash windows in the other bays. The windows and door have flat arch brick lintels. There is a box cornice with a serpentine molding. The molding continues along the eaves of the end gables and has a wood arch trim at the corners. The gable ends both had two casement windows which have been bricked in. The side and rear facades are of common bond, with windows in all bays on the rear facade and a door has been inserted in the south gable end. A one story screened porch extends across the east facade. The interior has a two room plan.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Hardcastle Mill House is a fine example of the Federal style as applied on a small scale in this region. The house contains some refined details but generally presents a provincial appearance and retains country characteristics such as the two room floor plan. Built by a miller named Hardcastle, it reflects the status that millers held in the community.
